Fees and expenses

There are no entry or exit fees payable by investors. The ongoing fees and expenses paid from the Fund are:

- an ongoing management fee of 1.4% p.a. of the gross asset value of the Fund, from which normal operating expenses are met; and
- abnormal operating expenses.

All fees received from managing the Fund's investments, net of expenses incurred, are donated to Social Ventures Australia (SVA), an Australian based non-profit organisation. For more information visit www.socialventures.com.au.

Investment philosophy

History has shown that holding investments in 'growth' assets (such as shares or property) over long periods of time usually provides superior returns compared to other investments. Whilst this is attractive to investors, many would also ideally like to minimise their exposure to the large falls that occur in growth markets at various times.

We believe that in the long term the valuations of share markets tend to follow a relatively stable trend line. However, over the short to medium term markets can become very overvalued, the extent of which can be measured in terms of the number of standard deviations from the 'normal' long term trend line. When this occurs, we believe it is sensible to lower the exposure to shares until 'in trend' values (or below) once again prevail. This action may in turn crystallise capital gains resulting in tax leakage, but we believe that:

- allowing tax to dominate your investment thinking is dangerous to your wealth;
- not everyone is concerned about paying tax on capital gains if the trade-off is lower risk to capital - plus some investors do not pay tax or are subject to low tax rates through their superannuation fund.

Given the above, the investment philosophy of the Fund is the following:

- to have the majority of the Fund invested in growth assets (being Australian shares, international shares, and/or property) as the 'default' position;
- progressively increase the weighting to cash and fixed interest securities if growth assets appear very overvalued compared to long term trends; and
- head back to being predominantly invested in growth assets once valuations return to normal or fall below long term trend lines.

This is often referred to as a 'mean reversion' strategy.

The growth assets we choose to invest in can include listed Australian shares (large companies and/or smaller companies), listed international shares (operating in mature economies/markets and/or emerging economies/markets) and/or listed property securities (whether in Australia or overseas).

We recognise that different types of growth assets will behave differently over time depending on where their values are relative to their long term 'equilibrium' position. For example, at some points in time Australian shares may be relatively undervalued compared to international shares, at which time we would expect to have a much greater weighting to Australian shares.

We also have a natural bias to owning Australian shares because of the prospect of receiving franked dividends, which are generally attractive from both a yield and tax perspective compared to other asset classes.

It is possible that at various points in time we could regard all growth assets to be relatively overvalued relative to their long term 'equilibrium' positions. If this was the case, we are permitted to hold up to 50% of the Fund in cash and/or fixed interest securities. This strategy will inevitably mean Third Link Growth Fund will perform below other multi-sector growth funds over some time periods. However, we have the conviction to manage the Fund as outlined above because we passionately believe that it is in the best long term interests of investors. Successful investing is about long term time frames, patience, and a willingness to run against the herd if needs be. This is why the Fund measures its success over longer rather than shorter time frames, aiming to outperform the returns of the Morningstar Multi-sector Growth Market Index after fees over rolling five year periods.
